CEPS joins the Green Growth Knowledge Platform as Knowledge Partner

Brussels, 30 November 2017

CEPS is pleased to announce its recent affiliation to the Green Growth Knowledge Platform (GGKP) as a Knowledge Partner. Established in January 2012 by the Global Green Growth Institute (GGGI), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the United Nations Environment Programme (UN Environment) and the World Bank, GGKP is the principal global partnership of leading international organisations and research institutes that promotes the green economy transition worldwide.

The network primarily focuses on:

- i) identifying major knowledge gaps in green growth theory and practice and addressing those gaps by promoting collaboration and coordinated research; and
- ii) using world-class knowledge management and communication tools to give practitioners and policymakers the analysis, guidance, information and data necessary to support a green economy transition.

CEPS was invited to join GGKP as a Knowledge Partner thanks to our work on the circular economy, smart cities and green economy, and we will support the global network by sharing our research and knowledge generated on these issues. Participation in this network will also enable CEPS to reach a large international audience with its research.
